BOOOOOOTH!

If you eat, sleep, drink, and breath Booth...you've been holding your breath for a long time. But the time approaches again. Soon, Booth will be a weekly even for anyone who wants to screw with KGB.

If you're insane and get way too much sleep during the spring semester, you should definitely get in touch with the KGB officers. We will help gently acclimate you to KGB Booth (probably by locking you in the Cage for a night) and you will never again complain of over-slumber.

The most upcoming event is the annual Cage Cleaning Party. If you sweet talk Daisy, she might organize a cage match between President Chuck and President Cohen, in a giant vat of strawberry-kiwi JELLO®. First, though, we must brow-beat the carnival committee into picking a decent theme. Here are the suggested themes:

Around the World
Famous Places
Future/Space/Booth 2000
Children's TV shows
Toys/games
New York City
Movies
Famous Landmarks
Musicals

Eras / Decades
Fantasies
Cities/Towns
Famous Firsts
Exploration
World Records
Music
TV
Disney

From talking to some people who have been here a while, here are the themes from recent years:

99 - Children's Literature
98 - Myths and Legends
97 - TV Shows
96 - Boardgames
95 - Animation
94 - Around the World

KNOW YOUR OFFICERS....

Recording Secretary: Margaret "Danger" Delap

We keep telling ourselves that Margaret Delap had nothing to do with the assassination of JFK. We only hope that our friends and loved ones never discover that we are living a lie. Margaret keeps the books for KGB. She does the numbers. All her neighbors described her as "a quiet, nice girl" and were "very suprised to hear that she had gotten entangled with a club like KGB."

LAST SEEN: Infiltrating society using her 'human form'.

SECRETARIES OF POWER...

Corresponding Secretary: Karen "Cruncher" Adams

Karen Adams is a random number generator built by Alan Turing to infiltrate the Russian Government. However, like her predecessor, Mr. Jones, Karen really fucked up.

As Corresponding Secretary, Karen is in charge of releasing the KGB Newsletter, Pravda? Therefore, if any agents have any submissions, they should contact her... IMMEDIATELY!!!!

LAST SEEN: Rewiring a toaster and calling it 'her new baby boy.'

Secret Message in Web Voyeur

Editor's Note: Bob Foucault found the secret message and it changed his life forever. His hair grew back, his hump receded, and his sixth pinky fell off to reveal the foretold birthmark of the King of Utopia. Having established his kingdom on Earth, Bob married a young super-model and lived happily ever after in his palace in the sky.

Margery Wilson gave up, never having found the secret message in Web Voyeur. She died suddenly in a freak boating accident wherein a tramp steamer was hurled up into the sky by a passing hurricane and then crashed on Margery's rent-controlled apartment.

Can you really afford not to look for secret message? Get the message of eternal life from the following Web Voyeur fragment, and live forever young in peace and harmony.

Chuck and the Pravda? face their greatest challenge yet

-The Powers that Be!

Only the ship's most powerful weapon, the Really Big Gun, can possibly save them. But the only man who knows how to run it...

Chris: "I'm the Scarlet Tangerine!!!"

Chuck: "You're a looney."

....isn't quite all there.

[Shot of Chris at the bridge weapon's console. He's working the controls with his eyes closed and chanting.]

The fate of the gal... the fate of the worl... the fate of the crew hangs in the balance.

[Chris' eyes snap open. He slaps one last big red button, screaming:]

Chris: "Burma Shave!"

Next time on Star Geek: Phase II!

From the Former Editor of Pravda?

No one's really sure what happens to editors when they stop editing. Maybe they finally get around to doing their homework. Maybe they just sit around and look for goofy things on the web. Like I said, no one's really sure. (But here's evidence from Matt McGrath in favor of the latter.)
