THE ALCHEMICAL CODEX

PREFACE

Alchemy is the great binder in which we are all held together. We would not exist without its presence. This codex attempts to cobble our knowledge of this ancient art into one complete document. However, we must make clear that alchemy is a dangerous practice. It should only be performed with utmost care and attention. The foremost principle of alchemy is equivalent exchange. In order to gain, one must lose. In order to limit the misuse of alchemy, we must make one thing clear: the purpose of alchemy is to transmute Summit Cola into gold. Any alchemical process should be done with this goal in mind. Reckless alchemy is how one could lose all.

KNOWN PROCESSES AND INFORMATION

- Upon the mixture of Summit Cola and Milk, a new creation, known as Silk, is made
- Upon performing any general alchemical process on a bottle of water, a healing potion is created, which, when drunk, regains 1 hit point to the consumer
- Upon the shaking of a liquid in its container, one froth is added to its contents
- Upon a container with contents containing both froth and darkness of heart, one miasma replaces its other statuses
 - As of the penning of this codex, molasses is the only material known to contain darkness of heart
- Upon adding one froth to Silk, the contents are transmuted into Beer
- If Silk is drunk equivalent of one beer, the consumer now has froth, and is considered drunk
 - If a drunk member of the KGB general body is called upon to make a motion during the “new business” stage of the meeting, they are charged with an MUI (motioning under the influence)
- If one who is drunk wears sunglasses, they are now crunk
 - Crunk members of the KGB general body are exempt from any MUI’s

THE RISK

Luck is one of the greatest aspects of importance when performing alchemy, as it can cause extreme boons and banes. We must first define what one “lucky “ means. A lucky can be gained upon purchasing a new committee during a general body meeting of the Carnegie Mellon KGB for the price of exactly 7 United States dollars. Be careful, as every lucky one has makes them slightly more unlucky for the rest of their lives.

Upon performing any alchemical process, we must assess the risk of doing so. The alchemical elements of chance are thus:

- Any time one performs an alchemical process, they have a 1% chance of instantly creating gold for each lucky they have
- Any time one performs an alchemical process, they have a 1% chance of the material they are working with to explode. This would kill both them and their 2 neighbors. For every lucky one has, this chance increases by 5%. Under the current law, due to your action causing the death of anyone, you must then go to jail
