NEW EXEC? UH, YEAH

With every rotation of the Earth around the sun comes the new exec of the KGB. Here they are, I guess.

PRESIDENT - BENNER

In a quick revolution, Benner has finally reached her ultimate form: President of KGB. Although she spent two years quietly plotting this maneuver, the signs should have been clear: switching her major to Russian Studies, diligent research into KGB history, and strange, tyrannical ramblings emanating from her dorm room. Let us hope, for all our sakes, that this planning is worth it.

ONEVEEP - RYAN

By painting the fence 7146 times, Ryan has made it clear he has no boundaries when it comes to outreach, making him a perfect OneVeep. Ryan's various activities have led some to believe that he and CMU campus are one, or that he is a physical manifestation of the spirit of campus. Whatever the truth is, all that matters is his ability to lead unsuspecting students into ~~stea~~ KGB meetings.

TWOVEEP - DANIEL

Daniel has stepped down as KGB president. It is still debatable whether this was a willing decision or was part of a deal he could not refuse from Benner. Instead, he has been nominated as TwoVeep, his position before his reign as president. Daniel has promised to become an even better TwoVeep than the one he was before by bringing "a greater diversity of snacks." We hope this proponent of snack globalism fulfills his lofty ambitions.

CORSEC - NATHAN

Using the good ol' "mayonnaise on the table" strategy, Nathan has secured himself as CorSec for a second year. Nathan denies any use of magic in this vote, however some speculate he was in the possession of uranium stolen from the Physics department. Despite having no time for anything outside of school, he has promised an even greater Pravda? output. If this is physically possible is yet to be seen.

RECSEC - SAVI

Savi is our first new RecSec in 3 years, and she swears that she will fill the large shoes left for her by dedicating herself to 15 hours of typing practice every day. Some may note this leaves Savi only 9 hours a day to sleep, eat, and study. She has proved them wrong by typing at relativistic speeds, bending spacetime to her will.

TREASURER - ISAAC

Despite not really knowing what he was running for, Isaac has been elected KGB's treasurer. He says that "some things gotta be learned on the job," and who are we to disagree? As KGB's resident cryptid expert, Isaac says that a little mole man called "the fleckler" helps him manage our finances. As long as the bills get paid, we don't care how the job gets done.

S@A - NOAH

After his short reign as treasurer, Noah decided there was nothing he regretted more than leaving KGB exec, so he has come back with less responsibility in his name. Does this mean he can cause greater havoc without drawing attention to himself? Perchance.
