Corresponding Secretary Swept Away in Inexplicable Tide of Cat Photos

Tragic news from the Kremlin today as it has been announced that the KGB's beloved Corresponding Secretary has tragically drowned following the receipt of a suspiciously large number of cat photo Pravda? submissions. The photos were bulk delivered by USPS through the Kremlin mail slot all at once. This caused the photos to completely fill the lower floors of the house, engulfing the late CorSec instantly and causing immediate death by suffocation. It took other Kremlinites days to fully excavate the body, whereupon our CorSec was buried with the full military honors befitting such a man of the people. Foul play at the hands of the CIA is suspected, and most of the photos have been taken in for investigation; the cats depicted within them will also be questioned to determine how deep the conspiracy runs. Fear not Komrades! We will not allow such a blatant attack on our people to go unpunished! We were able to catch quick glimpses of some of the cat photos before they were taken away, and artist interpretations of those we saw may be found below.

Thank you to Kevin, Elise, Charles, and Teodora for being good Komrades and submitting to Pravda
